1. Course Description and Objectives

Criminal law is perhaps the most fascinating legal discipline imaginable. In studying crimes, criminals, and governmental responses to criminal behavior, we will grapple with issues that go to the very heart of who we are as individuals and as a society: What conduct constitutes criminal behavior? Where should we invest community financial resources for law enforcement and corrections? Who should be punished, and how should we punish them? To what extent should the age, social class, race, ethnicity or gender or the alleged criminal affect the application of criminal law? What role should a victim’s wishes play in a criminal prosecution?

We will not, however, spend all our time with our heads in the clouds of policy and philosophy; every day, we will dive down into the weeds of factual nuances, common law rules, and specific statutory provisions. Closely reading and carefully interpreting cases and statutes is a vital function of understanding criminal law. Applying a set of facts to a statute—a task that prosecutors and defense counsel perform every day—is fundamental to any study of American criminal law.

At the end of the semester, you should be able to:

a. Analyze a set of facts and apply the appropriate criminal law statute to those facts.

b. Intelligently address policy issues and controversies related to criminal law.

c. Understand and apply basic canons of statutory interpretation.

d. Understand basic criminal law concepts including, but not limited to, legality, actus reus, mens rea, intent, and defenses.

2. My Contact Information

   a. General. My office is in the dean’s suite, Room 136. Telephone number is 453-8722. E-mail address is cbehan@siu.edu. Cell number is 618-521-1849, if you need to text me or have an emergency.

   b. Office Hours. I have office hours on Mondays from 3:30-5:00. My teaching assistant(s) will also have office hours and will post those at the beginning of the semester.
c. Electronic Communication. Check your e-mail daily. I will use your TWEN e-mail address to send messages pertaining to class. Please feel free to e-mail me with questions and other observations about the class.

d. Problems and Issues. Despite the best efforts of professors and students, class is not always perfect. Sometimes a lecture or concept is unclear. Sometimes a fellow student does or says something insensitive or inappropriate that is not properly resolved by the professor in the classroom. You may experience personal frustration with something I do or say in the classroom. If you experience a problem or identify an issue in the class, please come see me so we can discuss it and resolve it. Some of my best growth and development as a professor has come from students taking the time to alert me to issues or problems I had not previously been aware of.

3. Class Time, Room and Seating Chart

This class meets Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, from 9:00 am to 9:50 am, in room 108 of the Law School. We will not meet on the following days: Monday, August 21 (eclipse); Monday, 4 September (Labor Day); Friday, 11 Nov (trial competition). To make up for missed classes, I will use a combination of out-of-class assignments and podcasts. On three other days, I will be out of the area but plan to have class at the regular time and place via videoconferencing technology. I’ll provide more detail about these other days as we draw closer to them. Friday, 29 Sep (trial competition); Wednesday, 1 Nov & Friday, 3 Nov (recruiting visit).

We will have a seating chart. By Thursday of the first week, you must form yourselves into three-person litigation teams. Please sit with the members of your litigation team. The second session of the course, Friday, 25 Aug, we will finalize the seating chart.

4. Litigation Teams and Class Participation

Each team consists of three students. You must select your own litigation teams by Thursday, 24 Aug, at 4 pm and turn that information in to my secretary, Carol Manis, on a 3x5 notecard. Carol’s office is in Room 243. Your notecard must contain the following information:

(1) The name of your litigation team (pick your own name, but please do not pick an inappropriate name)

(2) The names of each participant, along with his or her undergraduate institution, major and hometown

(3) An interesting fact, unknown to most people, about each member of the team.

In class, I call on litigation teams randomly. All teams must be prepared to discuss all aspects of the cases and materials assigned for the day. I do not permit members of a litigation team to either dominate the discussion at the expense of other members, or avoid participating. When I call on a team, I ensure that all members of the team participate. It’s in your best interest to meet as a team before class to ensure that everyone is prepared for class.
Although litigation teams are primarily responsible for the day’s discussion, all students in the room should be prepared to participate in the discussion. I call on students randomly, and I also welcome your voluntary participation. I expect students I call on to be prepared to argue either side of the issues we address in class. The assigned reading materials are an ideal resource to prepare you to make clear and cogent arguments in class. In most classes, you can expect up to one-third or more of class members to be called on to participate.

Some of our classroom interaction will occur by means of the Socratic method, during which I closely question you as you make your best argument for or against a particular idea or precept. However, we will also use group discussion, mock courtroom arguments in class, and so on. You should be prepared to participate in a variety of ways in our classroom dialogue.

Does class participation matter? Yes: the dialogue in class is an essential part of learning to think like a lawyer. Pay attention even when you are not actively participating. As an incentive to spur your preparation and participation, class participation is worth 10% of your grade. Everyone starts out with full credit for class participation. If I call on you and you are not prepared or are inadequately prepared, I will publicly ask you to see me after class. I will make an appropriate adjustment to your participation grade for lack of preparation, and I will also assess an absence for that day. Even though I call on teams, I grade class participation individually.

You don’t have to be brilliant, but you must be prepared and you must participate when called on.

An important note about classroom participation. Criminal law is a messy business and often involves controversial or painful subjects. Please be respectful of the viewpoints and experiences of others as we discuss these topics. If you or someone to whom you are close has been a victim of the type of crime we are discussing for the day, please let me know before class that you would be uncomfortable participating in the day’s discussion. I won’t call on you, and I don’t need to know the specific reasons for your discomfort. If, however, your objection to participation is merely ideological (for example, if you are morally opposed to the death penalty and don’t want to be asked to give arguments in favor of the death penalty), you’re out of luck. A good lawyer is able to see the merits and shortcomings of all arguments pertaining to an issue.

5. Workload and Preparation for Class

The American Bar Association standards for accrediting law schools contain a formula for calculating the amount of work that constitutes one credit hour. According to ABA Standard 310(b)(1), “a “credit hour” is an amount of work that reasonably approximates: (1) not less than one hour of classroom or direct faculty instruction and two hours of out-of-class student work per week for fifteen weeks, or the equivalent amount of work over a different amount of time.” This is a 3-credit hour class, meaning that we will spend three 50-minute blocks of time together each week. The amount of assigned reading and out of class preparation should take you about 2 hours for each class session and 6 hours for the week. All told, applying the ABA standard to the number of credits offered for this class, you should plan on spending a total of 9 hours per week (3 in class and 6 preparing for class) on course-related work.
6. Submitting Case Briefs and Course Outlines

Case Briefs. In order to ensure that you meet the workload standard, you are required to turn in an electronic copy of your case briefs and preparation materials prior to the beginning of each class on the TWEN dropbox. These submissions are automatically time-stamped by the TWEN system. Late submissions will not be accepted or graded. If it doesn’t appear in the TWEN dropbox, for my purposes, you didn’t turn it in. If you are going to be absent, you can turn in the materials anyway by the deadline, and still receive credit. If you miss class, and also fail to turn in the materials by the deadline, you will simply receive a 0 for that day. You will also want to bring a hard copy to class to assist you in class discussions and help you with note-taking.

My teaching assistants will screen these for compliance with the requirements that are listed below. They will bring to my attention any issues or deficiencies they notice in the materials. These classroom preparation materials are worth 10% of your final grade. They will be graded as follows:

5 points. Meets all the formatting and technical requirements for the assignment. Shows genuine effort and insight.

0 Points. Document is not turned in, or does not meet the formatting and technical requirements for the assignments. Apparent effort is insufficient to demonstrate actual compliance with the assignment.

Here is the format you must use for this assignment. Use this exact format (you get a 0 on the assignment if you don’t, and that will be your fault, not mine):

1. Your name, the class session number (on the reading schedule) and date for the materials.

2. Case Briefs. Case briefs for each principal case in the day’s reading assignment. A principal case is one that is not listed in the Notes and Questions section. Each case brief must be formatted as follows:

   a. Case name.
   b. Brief Factual Summary (include charges and result at trial, including sentence if available).
   c. Issue on appeal.
   d. Majority holding.
   e. Majority Analysis. (Main points made by the majority in support of the holding. Separate these into bullet points. No more than 5 bullet points per case.)
   f. Dissent or Concurrence. (Brief summary, no longer than a paragraph.)
3. Honor Code Certification. This sentence must appear at the end of each document: “I certify that this is my original work product. I understand that making a false certification is an Honor Code violation.”

Course Outlines. On several occasions throughout the semester, you will turn in your in-progress course outline. You may use any format you choose for a course outline, but it must be your own work and contain an honor code certification. The outlines count the same as a case brief for grading purposes.

7. Policy on Collaboration and Plagiarism. Any work product that you turn in during this class must be entirely your own. Although you are encouraged to study together and to prepare for class as a litigation team, you cannot turn in another person’s work product and claim it as your own. This applies to class preparation materials.

8. Listening, Note-Taking and Computer Policy.

   Computers and cell phones are not permitted in class. Active, sustained listening, without the distraction of electronic media, is an absolutely critical skill for lawyers. Lawyers do not access the internet during trials, depositions or client meetings, nor, in most cases, do they use computers to take notes during these events. I expect you to listen in class. From time to time, I will ask a random student to summarize or critique the argument another student has just made.

   Although I use some Powerpoint slides in class, I do not plan to post them on the TWEN page or make them available to students.

9. Policy on Recording Class

   You are not authorized to record the class.

10. Course Materials

    a. Coursebook. Our primary classroom text is Dressler & Garvey, Criminal Law Cases and Materials (7th edition 2015). This book is available at the SIU campus bookstores, the 710 Bookstore, and the Saluki Bookstore.

    b. TWEN Page. Other course materials can be found on the Westlaw TWEN page associated with this course. You are responsible to check the TWEN page and to read any assigned materials posted to the TWEN page.

    c. If you need supplementary materials, the law library has a substantial number of treatises and other materials on reserve in the criminal law section. These resources can be useful in understanding difficult concepts or providing a more in-depth look at different criminal law subjects. A particularly useful resource is Joshua Dressler, Understanding Criminal Law (6th ed. 2012).
d. Commercial Study Aids. I neither endorse nor recommend their use. Some students believe that commercial outlines are a good substitute for reading the assigned text, participating in class, and struggling to understand the material on their own. Those students are wrong. Commercial study aids, if abused, are a great way to earn bad grades and, eventually, fail the bar.

11. Attendance Policy & Classroom Etiquette

Attendance is required. You may miss no more than four (4) classes during the semester. I will pass around an attendance sheet every day. Your original, genuine initials on the attendance sheet certify two things: (1) you are physically present; and (2) you are prepared for class. “Prepared” means that you have read the assignment, completed any written assignments, and thought about any assigned questions or problems so you can discuss them in class if called upon. Remember, if I call on you and you are unprepared, I will count you as absent for that day, in addition to the grade penalty for being unprepared.

Come to class on time. It is a tremendous distraction to everyone when someone strolls in after class has begun.

Act like a professional in class. Be courteous to the others in the classroom by keeping distractions to a minimum and giving the class your full attention. Do not text, send instant messages, or hold private conversations with others during class. If it is necessary for you to leave the classroom while class is in session, please minimize the disruption when entering or exiting the room.

I also expect you to act like a professional after class. I am often saddened to learn that some students engage in social media flame-fests during or after class, mocking other students for viewpoints and thoughts expressed during class. Such behavior is beneath members of a learned profession. Depending on the severity of the behavior, it may also violate the SIUC Student Conduct Code rules prohibiting harassment, bullying, obstruction or intimidation, or harassment via technology. See SIUC Student Conduct Code § 2.3.5. If you are the victim of or witness to such behavior, please let me know.

12. Grading and Evaluation

I will evaluate your work in several ways:

a. Classroom preparation and participation. (10% of your final grade.) Remember, everyone starts out with full credit for classroom preparation and participation. Everyone will be called on and will have opportunities to participate. Make sure you are prepared! It is theoretically possible for everyone to receive full credit for preparation and participation, and I sincerely hope you do.

b. Writing Across the Curriculum Assignment. (Ungraded, but you must demonstrate proficiency to get credit.) This will be an essay question administered electronically and graded by me. If you do not demonstrate proficiency on the essay, you will be given the opportunity to rewrite it after receiving feedback on it. Details to be provided later.
c. Midterm Examination. (20%) This examination will be administered on Friday, October 13 as part of 1L Midterm Week. It consists of both multiple choice and essay questions. Further details about the midterm will be forthcoming later in the semester.

d. Case Briefs & Course Outline Drafts. (10%)

e. Final examination (60%). The final examination is closed book and cumulative, meaning that it covers the entire semester. The examination is scheduled for Tuesday, Dec 5, at 8:15 am. Further details about the exam will be forthcoming later in the semester, but it will be a mix of multiple choice and essay questions.

13. Students with Disabilities

Disability Support Services provides the required academic and programmatic support services to students with permanent and temporary disabilities. DSS provides centralized coordination and referral services. To utilize DSS services, students must come to the DSS to open cases. The process involves interviews, reviews of student-supplied documentation, and completion of Disability Accommodation Agreements. http://disabilityservices.siu.edu/. Upon completion of a Disability Accommodation Agreement with DSS, students should bring the agreement to the School of Law Registrar’s Office to ensure the School of Law provides the proper classroom and examination accommodations.

14. Emergency Procedures

Southern Illinois University Carbondale is committed to providing a safe and healthy environment for study and work. Because some health and safety circumstances are beyond our control, we ask that you become familiar with the SIUC Emergency Response Plan and Building Emergency Response Team (BERT) program. Emergency response information is available on posters in buildings on campus, available on BERT’s website at www.bert.siu.edu, Department of Safety’s website www.dps.siu.edu (disaster drop down) and in Emergency Response Guideline pamphlet. Know how to respond to each type of emergency.

Instructors will provide guidance and direction to students in the classroom in the event of an emergency affecting your location. It is important that you follow these instructions and stay with your instructor during an evacuation or sheltering emergency. The Building Emergency Response Team will provide assistance to your instructor in evacuating the building or sheltering within the facility.

15. Saluki Cares

The purpose of Saluki Cares is to develop, facilitate and coordinate a university-wide program of care and support for students in any type of distress—physical, emotional, financial, or personal. By working closely with faculty, staff, students and their families, SIU will continue to display a culture of care and demonstrate to our students and their families that they are an important part of the community. For Information on Saluki Cares: (618) 453-5714, or At the School of Law, Assistant Dean Judi Ray is also available to help students access university resources. Her email is judiray@siu.edu, and her phone number is 618-453-3135.

14. Reading Schedule.

The following is the reading schedule for the first three weeks of the term. The reading schedule is flexible, and I reserve the right to change it if I believe we need to spend more time on a particular topic. Think of it as similar to an airline flight schedule. Even though flights are occasionally delayed, you still have to be at the airport on time. In other words, even if we don’t finish a particular topic on the assigned day, you still have to be prepared for the next day’s material.
